FOREWORD

A NEW RACE OF GLADIOLI! The two beautiful seedlings, No. 27 and 72, as illustrated on pages 5 and 6, are the forerunners of a new race of gladioli. I have new seedlings of this rare gladiolus in the most clear and exquisite colors, yellow, pink, red, rose, and white. These flowers must be seen to be appreciated, and the most vivid imagination can not grasp their beauty without seeing them.

They are not, as many people think, offsprings from the primulinus hybrids, but are bred from the standard large flowering varieties, very sturdy and prolific.

My stock of these varieties is not sufficient to offer them for sale this season, but I have decided, in order to introduce this new race of gladioli to give one bulb of No. 72 to each customer purchasing only fifty dollars worth of bulbs from this catalog.

With the season's best wishes, I am,

Yours truly,

JOHN H. McKIBBIN.

THE GLADIOLUS

This brief article is written for two classes of flower lovers—those who have and those who have not grown the Gladiolus.

Certainly those who have never grown this beautiful flower have a surprise in store for them if they become acquainted with it. And those who have grown it perhaps for years, perpetuating the original stock of long ago, can have but a faint idea of the advance that has been made in recent years.

Care, patience and skill devoted to the improvement of this flower have been fruitful of result, and the good work is being steadily carried onward. Specialists in floriculture are earnestly at work in this line. New varieties are being created, poorer ones eliminated, and the means known to the profession are used to gain the end in view so that we confidently predict a future for the Gladiolus far in advance of its past, or even its present, although the Gladiolus of today is greatly superior to that of past years.

The Gladiolus is not only one of the grandest of outdoor flowers in cultivation but it possesses qualities that render it almost unrivalled as a cut flower for the home or for the florists, for feast or funeral, for the bride or the boudoir, the club or the drawing room, it is equally adapted.

Its gorgeous colorings, its graceful form, its wide variety of tints, its size and strength and added to all these its remarkable lasting qualities make it pre-eminently desirable as a cut flower. In the garden its long season of bloom, together with its great variety of color, form and types makes it one of the most striking and noble of all garden subjects, and in the hands of the floral artist it lends itself to all manner and kinds of floral arrangement. It is suitable for a wide range of floral uses and as a decorative subject has few if any equals.

MAKING SOMEBODY GLAD

Last year, dear friends, I introduced you to the Glads. I could tell by the expression of your happy faces that you were well pleased. Afterwards when all of you had quietly bid them goodbye I asked the Glads how they must feel when they make so many people happy. What do you suppose they said?

"It almost makes our hearts burst with joy to bring color and happy smiles to everybody's face. But, we are sad because we noticed one cold, stern man among the ones who were so elated over our beauty," replied the Glads in their low, soft melodious voices, "and we wish to make him happy, too."

So the Glads called a meeting of all the leaders, the Glories, Kings, Princes, Presidents and all the rest of the Glad family. They soon devised a plan by which they hoped to make the old gentleman happy.

Now the plan they had thought of was a very brave thing to do indeed, for he was so cruel that little children, when they saw him, ran away in great fright, and little dogs, gathering their much too long tails about them, hastily scampered away. The children called him Old Man Grouch and well he deserved this harsh name because even the birds flew past his bare little home without their usual merry songs.

As spring drew closer, with all the enticing beauty of the soft, rippling winds, the gay notes of the birds, hosts of golden daffodils, and blue skies fringed with feathery clouds, the Glads carried out their plan.

One bright morning when all the world was bathed in golden sunshine, Old Man Grouch was greeted by a fairy land of colors.

There before him in splendor stood the brave Glads. They let the wind softly sway them gracefully back and forth as they smiled up at the sun who was watching them closely.

Defiance and Sentinel guarded the dainty little ladies and gentlemen carefully for fear Old Man Grouch would harm them.

Prince of India, with his cloak of bronze and silver, and still with his bosom friend, Red Copper, were the first to appear as the unhappy man gazed over them. Then his eyes rested on Purple Glory and his family of Glories. From one beautiful face to another his eyes roved until they reached the pure pink flushed face of Dorothy McKibbin.

At first the flowers were afraid that the still face would turn more angry so they waited in silence.

Dorothy McKibbin tried to look brave and her beautiful upturned face, ruffled in by velvety petals, quivered just a wee bit and a small diamond tear fell down her face.

Suddenly the once stern man was on his knees with tears streaming down his cheek. His fingers trembled as he carefully cupped a beautiful pink face between his hands.

A small cheery note of a bird was heard very faintly as though afraid, then swelled into a rich throaty song. A soft, warm rain fell and washed away the ice that had kept the heart cold so long.

The sunbeams streamed through the raindrops and a rainbow appeared. In the sky soared a skylark, its song of happiness filling the world. Higher and higher it soared until it seemed to melt into the sky. But, its song still more sweetly warbled from its throat and could yet be heard and it reached the depths of every heart.

A little child, almost golden in colorful youth and happiness, came shyly into the now beautiful garden and laid her hand upon the happy old man.

The tears of happiness glistened like diamonds in the Glads' faces, for once again they had made a haven of rest out of a cold heart.

DOROTHY McKIBBIN.

IDEAL

Hardy, beautiful, long-lasting when cut, minus the cloying odors of so many well-known flowers, it is an admirable decoration for the sick room. Ornamental and odorless, brilliant and sturdy, requiring little attention, it is the one horticultural display that can truly be called ideal.

No. 27 Seedling is both ruffled and lacinated, has large wide open flowers nicely placed on long wiry stems. Beautiful clear deep red color. You will note that this is altogether a new and distinct type of gladiolus. They are as life-like as butterflies, as graceful as orchids. Not for sale this season.

No. 72 Seedling: Queen of the dainties. The beautiful dainty shell-pink color, the tall graceful spike, the beautiful lacinated blooms, measuring from four to six inches, gracefully placed combine to make it one of the most beautiful gladioli among the new creations. Not for sale this season.

An Invitation

The poet says: "It is without presumption and in serene confidence that I swing wide the gate and invite kindred spirits filled with the love of flowers, and a worship of colors as embodied in them, to come with me into the confines of my garden and exchange confidences."

One of the strongest principles in the business code is that of confidence. It is the base of all stability and is a kind of magnet which draws splendid things to it. Enduring success in business comes only as a result of confidence and good will. It comes as a result of a desire for accomplishment coupled with a proper recognition of the principles of fairness in business.

Fairness in business, as in the ordinary affairs of personal friendship, is one of the things which always inspires confidence and builds good will. Without the confidence and good will of his customers, it would be impossible for any man to succeed in business.

In the entire cycle of our merchandising, one of the hardest tasks is to present our talks in print in such form that you will see our flowers as we see them, to understand the written words as we mean you should, to take the language as it comes to you in cold print and construe it in thoughts and pictures of beautiful, living flowers growing in your own gardens—for us to set forth our thoughts and accomplishments in such a way that they will inspire confidence and good will.

How much better and easier this task would be were we able to meet each of you for a little personal visit! Then you would know of the warm spirit of friendliness we have for you.

We wish it were possible for you to visit our gardens. If you did, you would find a "Visitors Welcome" sign which means all it implies, for when you come to us you are giving us an opportunity to "show our goods" as we can in no other way. You will always find someone who will care for you, show you through and give you information on any subject connected with the growing of Gladioli. We have no "trade secrets" for if we know of, or find a newer and better way of doing things with Gladioli, we are always glad to share that knowledge with you. It is just one of the ways we have of convincing you that we want, and will value your confidence and good will.

If in some way we can make it possible for you to have better gardens and better flowers, we know that our interest in you will help in building your confidence in us.

It is then, with a very sincere thought for good to all that we invite you to share our gardens with us for we know that you will see and learn things there that will be of great value and interest to you in your own gardens.

Our gardens are open to our friends every day in the blooming season.

COME!

JOHN H. McKIBBIN.

IDEAL MIXTURE—To secure the greatest variety and beauty from Gladioli it is absolutely necessary to grow them in mixture also. To make this statement a reality, we have made up a collection from thousands of the best named and unnamed kinds containing all the tints, colors, shapes and sizes both in the plain and ruffled petal varieties. Each year we add a number of the newer named varieties and a number of choice unnamed seedlings to this mixture.

This mixture will afford pleasure all the season through and will continually present new beauty, pleasures, surprises and beautiful flowers in endless profusion. To secure the best value and variety it is necessary to obtain a considerable number of bulbs, and therefore we have decided to offer our customers and friends an opportunity to purchase a large and beautiful collection at a price within the reach of all. Doz., 75c; 100, $4.50.

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE

1925 introduction. Large, royal purple red, from five to eight large blossoms open at a time. Medium height plant. Good straight spikes. A rapid propagator. Showy and conspicuous.

SENTINEL

A wonderful Gladiolus with its large, dark green drooping foliage and the tall straight spikes and from 4 to 7 large open blooms of bright pink with beautiful iris penciled throat, will attract the attention of the least concerned. And under the most unfavorable weather conditions it has never failed to produce the finest kind of cut flowers. Florists prefer it to roses for floral work.

CARE AND CULTURE OF THE GLADIOLUS

The Gladiolus possesses great vigor and tenacity of life, growing and blooming even under adverse and unfavorable circumstances. The hardiness of the bulb is remarkable.

This does not make it any less true that it is wise to give it the best of care, and it will well repay such care.

Preparing the Soil.

The soil should be made fine and mellow to a considerable depth, plowing or spading 10 to 12 inches deep.

Fertility of Soil.

If not already in a good state of fertility the soil should be made so by a liberal dressing of manure. For best results this should be applied in the fall previous to the planting in the spring. In applying manure in the spring it should be done as early as possible before planting time. Some good commercial fertilizer such as bone meal or prepared sheep manure worked into the soil before planting is a great advantage to the plants.

While the Gladiolus will grow in almost any fertile soil, it succeeds best in a sandy or gravelly loam, with good drainage, and will also thrive in a clay loam if the subsoil be not too compact.

If the season be dry it is well to water thoroughly occasionally, up to the period of bloom, avoiding the trampling or stirring of the ground while wet.

Planting.

If the flowers are desired mainly for cutting for bouquets or decorative work they may be planted in rows eighteen or twenty inches apart, or wider if desired and placing the bulbs four to six inches apart in the row. A convenient way to do this is to make a furrow with a small hand plow and place the bulbs in the bottom not less than four inches deep, covering with the mellow soil. This affords the most convenience in after care and cultivation.

Planting should be done as early as the ground can be brought into good condition in the spring. A safe rule is to plant when ordinary farm crops, such as corn and oats are being planted.

Cultivation.

Treatment after planting is simple, but neglect is no part of it. Weeds are to be absolutely kept down and the soil finely cultivated and stirred once a week, keeping the surface level until bloom appears after which it is well to throw a little soil to the rows, hilling up a little as this enables the plant to stand up during storms.

Cutting the Blooms.

The spikes should be cut near the base, leaving from three to five leaves on the plant, as soon as the lower or first flower expands. Cut thus in the bud they may be shipped great distances and in a vase of water will continue to bloom for ten days. With most varieties the delicacy of color is enhanced by blooming thus. The purest white, for instance, is only attained by this method and other colors are finer.

Digging and Storing.

Bulbs should be dug before the plants are too ripe in the fall before the hard frosts. Dig the bulbs and cut off the tops closely against the bulbs. Dry well in the air and sunshine, cure thoroughly indoors for a few weeks, then store in a cool dry place. It is best not to place bulbs more than four inches deep while in storage. Florists' flats are very suitable for this purpose. Extremes of dampness and dryness are alike to be avoided. If they sprout they are too warm, if they shrivel they are too dry, while freezing destroys them at once.

BULBS IN QUANTITY AT WHOLESALE PRICES

We sell at wholesale to anyone whether you are a commercial grower or not, provided you take in quantities as listed in wholesale price list. List mailed upon request.

All Retail Shipments PREPAID

This is an important and valuable concession to the buyer. When we tell our friends that the item of Express and Postage in our business is one of the largest we have, many of them do not think it a fact, and that we exaggerate, yet it is a fact and when all shipments are prepaid, it becomes an important discount in prices to the buyer. By prepaying all shipments instead of sending them C. O. D., the buyer enjoys a much lower price on his purchases than if he were compelled to pay this item himself. He will find it a time and bother saving method too, for with the C. O. D. method he must be at home to receive and pay for them when they arrive, else he might need to make a trip to the Express or Post Office to secure them in good time and in good condition. The Postage and Express charges amount to a considerable per cent of the order and this is always saved to the buyer who sends to us for his bulbs.

Our "Wholesale Prices"

Growers and dealers in bulbs always find it a hard matter to exactly discriminate between those who are rightly entitled to wholesale or retail prices, and many times business is lost to the dealer through his inability to make a proper discrimination in the two classes.

Because of the number of our friends who buy for growing and resale purposes, and who are not devoting all their time and efforts to this, and who, therefore, are not listed or rated with the usual Commercial Rating Agencies, we think it fair to all to not discriminate, but to sell at wholesale prices to those who buy in wholesale quantities.

All dealers have their own method of listing the buyers as either wholesale or retail. The average method of listing is an arduous and costly, as well as a delicate matter, and to be fair to all we use the "quantity purchase" method as our guide. We cannot deviate from the prices and quantities as listed in our wholesale list for they are made possible by quantity purchases only.

Letters of Appreciation

We receive so many letters of appreciation of our bulbs and service, that we are unable to answer each letter personally, and are therefore taking this opportunity of expressing our appreciation.

We know of no cases of dissatisfaction, but if there are any and they will write us, we will do our best to convince them of our willingness to make everything right.
